

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

I am writing to ask you to please require telephone companies to allow local Internet Service Providers access to the phone network for the purpose of providing broadband Internet service.

Removal of these requirements will be the removal of competition in the DSL market. If this requirement was not in place, I would have exactly ONE choice for DSL Internet service -- one that charges more money for poorer service.

If you are truly interested in fair prices and competition in the broadband market, then you MUST maintain these requirements.

Thank you for your time. I'm certain you will make the right decision to protect consumers and prevent telephone monopolies from controlling DSL.

Sincerely,

David L. Cross
